DEATH OF DR. R. B. ELLIS.

[From the Carson Appeal, of January 14.] This highly cultivated scholar, profound intellect, and true gentleman, died in Carson, last Sabbath morning, while quietly sitting in his chair. He had seemed to be improving and high hopes were entertained of his recovery. Up to within a few hours of his death he appeared better than ever, when unexpect-edly to all, he sat and died, as if going into a peaceful slumber. The manner of his death was truly characteristic of his life. He was a man of quiet wisdom who yet listened with courtesy to all who yet listened with courtesy to all with whom he talked, however inferior they might be to himself in mind or attainments. The Doctor was one of the few real old time gentlemen left to us as relics of a finer society. While his heart was kind and his feelings tender, his manner was marked by a noble pride and polished courtesy. His mind was pre-eminently speculative and metaphisical in its bias. He was besides a philosopher possessed of true statesmanlik. osopher, possessed of true statesmanlike views, a writer of rare powers, and a fine talker. It was a pleasure which no one will ever forget who enjoyed it, of list-ening to his conversation in which were ening to his conversation in which were combined in an extraordinary degree the attractive qualities of simplicity and wisdom. He was an earnest man, and his actions and words but pictured the living energy of a soul within that was alive to every noble and magnanimous impulse and always engaged upon the solution of some intellectual, human problem, to be tested and confirmed by trial in practice. The early settlers of Nevada and Calfornia are grieved to-day to know that their nia are grieved to day to know that their old time and beloved friend is gone, while those that knew him later will drop a tear with them in sad memory as they bid his spirit farewell at the border of the grave. While still thinking of him let us learn the events of this great and excellent man's life from the following sketch:

Dr. Ellis was born in Sussex county, Virginia, December 4, 1812. When about six years of age his father moved to a point in Ketucky, near Clarksville, Tennessec. In his academical course he graduated at Transylvania University, Leviners Kentaky. H. afterwards. Lexington, Kentucky. He afterwards graduated in medicine at the Pennsyl-vania Medical College, and entered upon the practice of his profession. The degree of M. D. was afterwards conferred upon him by the faculty of McLonnell Medical College in special recognition of the merits of a course of lectures deliv-ered by him before the students and faculty of that institution in 1848-9 upon cholera, its origin, progress and treat-ment with particular reference to its rav-

He was engaged in the practice of medicine forty years, beginning in Bourbon county, Kentucky, removing shortly afterwards to North Western Missouri. He was twice elected to represent the Northwest Senatorial District of that State in the State Senate, voting once for Colonel Benton for United States Senator, and afterwards against him on account of his views in relation to the admission of Texas. He practiced medicine in St. Louis, Missouri, from 1840 to 1850, when he removed to California, settling at Sacramento in his profession. He was twice elected to represent Sacra-mento county in the California Legisla-ture, and was President of the California

State Medical University.

He removed to Carson City, Nevada, in 1861, then to Reno in 1868, where he had his residence at the time of his death.

The Carson Appeal, of January 14, makes the following well-deserved complimentary notice of M. L. Yager, Deputy State Treasurer: The Herculean task of extracting dry-ness from figures has been accomplished by M. L. Yager, Deputy State Treasurer, in the beautiful and masterly way in which he has constructed the Treasury biennial report for the last two years. The report is a master piece of penmauship and skill in the fine art of book-keeping. It has the merit, also, of full-ness, of utter completeness, every transaction during the term of the Hon.

Jerry Schooling, being itemized to an almost dizzy fullness and exactitude.
Let the people be proud of such servants
as Schooling and Yager.
